Your home is your castle, but what lurks beneath...

There may be one thing you have overlooked...

We are aware of how much time, effort and money you have put into your park home to make it your perfect place to be. You may have just bought your home, or you may have spent time over the years enhancing your home with new additions such as roofing, windows, new kitchens, bathrooms and floorings.

However... don't overlook your chassis.

The chassis on your park home is the base on which the rest your home is supported. This is the only part of it's entire structure that cannot be replaced and therefore 'out of sight, out of mind' is not a good motto to adopt for your home!

What can affect the condition of your base and chassis?

- Squeaky floorboards?
This can be a sign that your chassis needs attention....
- Alterations to your park home
It is more than likely that the chassis was designed to support and carry the original weight of the home.

Any additions or alterations that have happened (or about to happen) will influence and increase the load distribution on the chassis.
 - A new tiled roof?
 - New cladding?
 - Replacement windows or doors?
 - New kitchen or bathroom?
- Corrosion
If your home is more than 10 years old there is a risk that your chassis is subject to metal corrosion and therefore should be checked.

If any corrosion is present this needs to be removed and the chassis treated to prevent any further decay.

If the skirting of the home is not, or hasn't been, fitted properly, the chassis will be more vulnerable to corrosion from the elements.

If the chassis is not fully supported to cope with the new loads, it can become distorted over time and lead to possible collapse.

If your home is within 5 miles of the coast this also will influence the condition and lifespan of your chassis.
